our VALUES

HomeLife, Inc. embraces, endorses, and encourages behavior which reflects the following values:

Customer Focus

Our strength and purpose as an organization has grown from customer respect and trust.

Quality Improvement

Learning and improving are life-long endeavors for individuals as well as organizations. HomeLife, Inc. strives to improve systems that affect how we work as an organization to meet these goals.

Objective and Factual Information

Providing unbiased factual information and observations are keys to improved problem solving, decision making and continued improvement of organizational systems. Continuing to develop sound facts and observations, will improve the effectiveness of programming for the people we serve.

Active Treatment

On-going interaction with Home Member, Family, Case Manager, Guardian and Staff input, via case review meetings, person centered planning and collection of factual objective information is valued in an effort to engender effective problem solving and clinical stability. This facilitates increased community access and independence.

Self-Improvement and Development

The success of the organization is, in part, determined by its individual members. Employees who work at improving their skills, knowledge, and physical and mental well being not only help themselves but also help those around them. Investing time and resources for staff development that promotes greater success of the organization is key to our growth.

Teamwork

The recognition that working together can accomplish greater achievements than the sum of individuals working alone. Removing obstacles to cooperation and teamwork, and working collaboratively is among our most important values.

Human Dignity and Compassion for Others

Ours is a deep respect for all, based on equality and sensitivity to human need. Sympathetic concern for the suffering of others and a desire to help them through thoughtful, truthful, and kind actions is what brings us together.
